About 1100 on 31 July 1954, air-to-ground firing was practiced at Barth Airfield. Three MiG-15s approached from the direction of Ribnitz, made a local flight and subsequently, with short distance between the aircraft, fired at the targets in the center of the field with their aircraft weapons. After about 20 minutes, 3 other MiG-15s attacked in a similar way. No clearing up work at the field was observed, however, a civilian truck loaded with debris was seen proceeding from the northeastern corner of the field and a local resident stated that such work was under way.

Comment. The former airfield at Barth is used as firing range by the fighter regiments stationed at Puetnitz. 25X1

25X1

1. The old landing stage in Sellin on Ruegen Island was in ruins. Only the root of the bridge with the Strandhalle (Beach Pavillion) and the old seaward head of the landing stage were still visible. The middle section of the landing stage which extended over a length of about 300 meters was entirely in ruins and no new landing stage has been built.
2. No sea police barracks installations were seen in Sellin nor was any rumor heard that a sea police unit was stationed in Sellin. Sea police officers met repeatedly in restaurants in Sellin, were allegedly stationed in Sassnitz.
3. Only a few small rowboats belonging to beach fishers were seen in Sellin, where no fishing cutters are stationed.
4. The landing stage in Binz was also in ruins. No motor fishing cutters were seen in Binz or in Baabe.
